Death of a President – Story of Jealous and Revenge

Alen was going to do something he had planned for several years.

He took out his phone and called the killer, "I am the vice president kill him." In the motorcade, one shot, two shots, three shots. Kennedy was dead in front of the eyes of everyone.

Three months later, Alen became the President of United States. He felt he deserved it, but he also regretted for what he did.

On the day he swore to become the president, he said he would catch Kennedy's killer.

Two days later, he caught the contract killer he had employed to kill the president to fulfil his promise. He had lied to the killer that he would send money to his secretly when he was in jail. Alen had simply fulfilled his promise to his people.

However, some citizens and even the members in congress doubted he was the murderer and thought that he was just telling lies.

The FBI investigated secretly to find out the truth.

The FBI found that the one who planned to kill Kennedy was their president.

They didn't know what to do and they asked their vice president, Ford. Ford said, "I'll finish the work of our president!" Then, he went to the White House and took Alen to jail.

Suddenly, Sally, the first lady appeared and cried, "Why did you do that, do you know that I am carrying your son? What should I tell him about his father!" Sally cried and the tears dropped on Alen's shoes and his hands. He knew that his wife loved him very much. He was also shocked that he would be a father. He begged his wife and said, "Don't tell him about it and let him know how much I love him! Name him Timothy Brown!"

Alen suddenly went crazy. He grabbed the gun from the policeman and killed himself.

Twenty years later, Tim became a man, a clever and brave man.

One day, Tim found out that Ford was the one who 'killed' his father when he was looking for something in his mother's room. Usually the document should be locked in a little box, however that day the box was unlocked. He opened it with curiosity. He found the information.

He found out that his mum was the First Lady and he used to be the son of the president of the United States. He was full of anger. He decided to ask his mother when she came back.

Sally came back. Tim kept asking about his father. Sally told Timothy about things that happened twenty years ago. However, Sally did not say how his father died to fulfil the promise she made to Alen before he died.

Tim still thought that Ford was the one who had killed his father.

He went to the White House at night and tried to kill Ford with a knife in revenge.

The first cut was to Ford's neck. He was dying!

However, Ford used his last breath to prove he was innocent and took out Alen's diary saying that his father had killed Kennedy for becoming the president.

Ford was dead!

Timothy knew that he killed an innocent man. He was scared and felt remorse.

Tim ran away to India.

Tim changed his name to Rembrandt which sounds like the word 'remember' and Rembrandt's paintings always seemed peaceful to him.

He became a Buddhist.

He learnt to forgive, not only others, but also himself. He told people in India his story.

Everyone who heard the story felt sad for him and became a Buddhist like him.

On the other side of the world, America stopped looking for Ford's killer.

Two years ago, Ford knew this day would come. He would be killed by the son of Alen. Alen was his old best friend, so he wrote a letter to the FBI that they shouldn't try to catch the murderer if he was killed in order to help his old friend.
